SESSIONS AT AN END

Archaeological Institute Elects

This Afternoon.

COUNCIL AT A LUNCHEON

Philological Association Chooses Its New Officers.

Similarities in the Architecture of Sardis and Quirigua, Guatemala, Brought Out in Lectures.

PROF. FOWLER IS PRESIDENT

An executive session of the council of the Archaeological Institute of America at the New Willard hotel this afternoon, at which officers for the ensuing year will be elected, will bring to a close the joint convention of the American Philological Association, the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis and the archaeological organization, which has been in session in this city since Friday.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the members of the council were entertained at a luncheon at the New Willard hotel by the Washington Society of the Archaeological Institute.

Philologists Elect.

The election in the Philological Association yesterday afternoon resulted in the choosing of Prof. Harold North Fowler of Bryn Mawr College, president; Prof. Frank Abbott, first vice president; Prof. Carl D. Buck of the University of Chicago, second vice president, and Prof. Francis Gardner Moore of Columbia University, secretary and treasurer.

The new executive committee consists of the following: Prof. H. A. Sanders, Columbia University; H. A. Sanders, University of Michigan; John A. Scott, Northwestern University; Kirby F. Smith, Johns Hopkins University; and Arthur L. Wheeler, Bryn Mawr College.

The Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis elected Prof. George A. Barton of Bryn Mawr College, president; Dr. H. Cobb of Boston, recording secretary, and Prof. James Montgomery of Philadelphia, corresponding secretary.

Similarities of Architecture.

Similarities in the architecture of the ancient city of Sardis, in Asia Minor, and that of the ancient city of Quirigua, in Guatemala, were brought out in two illustrated lectures before a joint meeting of the archaeologists and philologists in the auditorium of the New National Museum yesterday afternoon.

The lectures were delivered by Howard Crosby Butler of Princeton University and Edgar L. Hewett of the School of American Archaeology, and were the last of the lectures in connection with the joint convention.

CHARLES S. SHREVE DIES

AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Head of Oldest Real Estate Business in the City Passes Away.

Charles S. Shreve, the dean of real estate men of Washington, died at his home, 1543 8th street northwest, last night, after an illness of more than a year.

Funeral services, arrangements for which have not yet been completed, probably will be held Thursday. Interment will be in the family burial plot in Glenwood cemetery.

Mr. Shreve was a lifelong resident of Washington, having been born here February 6, 1846. After receiving a grammar school education he started to work for the Morrison Paper Company at an early age. In 1867 he embarked in the real estate business, then a field of endeavor in Washington. His high integrity and fidelity soon won for him a host of friends in business circles. In 1872 Mr. Shreve married Miss Isabelle Hall. Mrs. Shreve died in January, 1888.

Mr. Shreve was the head of the oldest realty business in Washington. Had he lived one month more he would have been in business forty-seven years.

He was a member of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants, but was not identified with any other local organizations.

He leaves three children, two daughters, the Misses Fannie M. and Cora B. Shreve, dancing teachers, and a son, Charles S. Shreve, jr., a practicing attorney, who will continue the realty business established by his father nearly a half century ago.

The election in the Philological Association yesterday afternoon resulted in the choosing of Prof. Harold North Fowler of Bryn Mawr College, president; Prof. Frank Abbott, first vice president; Prof. Carl D.
